Utility customers can expect to see these updated rates with the first full billing cycle.

Overall, water rates for customers both inside and outside of city limits reflect minor adjustments, respectively, with no rate change for sanitation. Sewer rates, however, have increased in both 2020 and 2021 to provide necessary revenue for wastewater system improvements required by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to improve water quality in the Black River and Lake Erie.

The City has been in negotiations with the EPA since 2015 to develop long-term, comprehensive plans to address overflows from the wastewater system and wastewater pollution control, and the administration is committed to working with the EPA on updated options that maintain high water quality and services.
